Notice requiring submission of a planning application for development already carried out.

What does this notice mean?

You have received this notice because the planning authority believe that you have either built something or are doing something on your property for which you should have obtained planning permission. The planning authority has therefore issued you this notice requiring you to submit a planning application for the work that has been carried out (a retrospective planning application).

What happens next?

You need to either submit a planning application by the date stated in the notice or Remove the caravan.

What happens if I don't submit an application?

If you don't submit an application the planning authority may take further enforcement action. This can ultimately mean that you would face prosecution, and/or be required to remove the development.

What happens if I think I should not have received the notice?

If you believe that you should not have received this notice; for example, because you have no interest in the land to which it relates, then you should contact the local planning department as soon as possible.

If I submit a retrospective planning application, how will it be dealt with by the planning authority?

Your application will be handled in exactly the same way as any other application. You should be aware that the fact that you have been served this notice does not mean that permission will be granted. If the planning application is unacceptable then the planning authority may refuse it (in which case you may appeal) or may grant it subject to whatever conditions or restrictions are considered necessary to make the application acceptable.
