It is widely acknowledged that gambling can have social and economic impacts for some groups of people and research indicates that the highest prevalence of problem gambling is found among those who were unemployed. Socio-economic disadvantage arises from a complex range of factors which includes low/no wealth and low income.

We consider that local risk assessments provided by applicants or licensees should seek to address the following areas of concern as possible risks to the licensing objectives posed by the provision of gambling facilities at their premises and indicate the policies, procedures and control measures they would have in place to mitigate those risks:

- public health;
- mental health;
- addiction;
- homelessness;
- debt;
- education;
- location in relation to services for children, such as schools, playgrounds, leisure/community centres and other areas where children may gather;
- location in relation to alcohol licensed premises;

- location in relation to emergency accommodation;
- location in relation to places of worship, including all religious or faith denominations;
- location in relation to gambling or addiction support or treatment centres where children or vulnerable groups may be present;
- interaction with community welfare groups and safety partnerships;
- interaction with organisations such as Gamcare or equivalent local organisations;
- interaction with Betwatch scheme or equivalent organisations;
- supervision of operation of premises by management;
- supervision of operation of gaming machines;
- identification of vulnerable persons;
- identification of under-age persons;
- identification of problem gamblers;
- staffing levels information;
- staff training on intervention with vulnerable persons;
- staff training on intervention with under-age persons;
- staff training on intervention with problem gamblers;
- self-exclusion policy;
- self-exclusion records;
- crime incidents;
- anti-social behaviour incidents.

A considerable number of these areas are identified as factors relating to socio-economic disadvantage.
